Theme: on summer break!

August 7

"What Color Is Your Voice?"

Lay Speaker: Chela Sloper

This talk was first given in a hurried five-minute, 20-slide power point at Ignite Bend in October 2015. On this Sunday Chela will take more time to lay out connections between habitual patterns of thought and attitude and the pernicious traces of racism within us. She will highlight examples of institutional racism that once were government-sanctioned. Lastly, Chela will present a simple practice to help further our inner work of transformation. A Dance of Universal Peace will be shared in the Pete Seeger Gathering Hall after the service.

August 14 at 10:30am: "Voices Among Us"

Lay Speakers: Toni Colotte, Jameson O'Neal, Robin Slocum, and Mayme Trumble

These individuals will be sharing personal insights, thoughts and perhaps some deeper feelings with respect to the topics and conversations shared in Soul Matters groups this past year.

August 21 at 10:30am: "Journeys (Spiritual and Otherwise) Through Wilderness"

Lay Speakers: Megan Hooker and David Paulsmeyer

Megan Hooker and David Paulsmeyer will share their experiences and understanding about what being in nature and wilderness brings us, and the lessons they've learned about how the natural world has supported, healed, and taught them.

August 28 at 10:30am: "Being Present"

Guest Speaker: Jason Medina

Our speaker, currently Volunteer Coordinator for Partners in Care (hospice), and former hospice chaplain, will discuss opening ourselves to the people around us. Jason is an ordained minister with the Reformed Church in America.

Message from the President

I was recently given a "heart stone" inscribed with the word "openness." It sits on my desk at home and is a constant reminder of what I am aspiring to.

Wikipedia says:

OPENNESS is an overarching concept or philosophy that is characterized by an emphasis on transparency and free, unrestricted access to knowledge and information, as well as collaborative or cooperative management and decision-making rather than a central authority. Openness can be said to be the opposite of secrecy.

My goal for this year is to create an environment of openness and to restore our UUFCA sense of shared community, trust and love for each other. There is a great deal of pragmatic work that the Board must do this year, and I will share each and every boring detail with anybody who cares to hear about it. My president's letters will contain some information about board topics and future work that the Board will be undertaking.

The first of July was a time of many changes for me and for the Board. Besides my stepping into the role of president, I started working with four new board members (Max Merrill, Amy Falkenrath, Greg Byrne and Paul Bennett) and said farewell to our four departing board members (Larry Price, Kathy Day, Greg Holmberg and Judy Hurlburt), while being right in the middle of the process to select a Settled Minister Search Committee.

The teamwork and cooperation of both the outgoing and incoming board members during this process was phenomenal, and we were able to form a great search committee. We also set a precedent for the type of cooperation and seamless transition that we will need in the future. Many thanks to all 12 board members, who share their time, talents, energy and commitment so generously with our community.

The first board meeting with the new board was on Thursday, July 14. Topics included:

- Financial Overview (How did we do with income/expenditures last year? What do we need to be mindful of this coming year?)
- Settled Minister Search Committee (Who was chosen for the team and what do we need to do to support them?)
- Governance Philosophy and Working Models (How do we work together?)
- Bylaw and Governance Taskforce status updates (How do we document our agreements?)

One of the things we are going to do this year is to provide clearer and more prompt communication about the work of the board. I have asked that board meeting notes include a bit more “narrative” of our discussions, so all can see how we arrived at our decisions. I am also going to try and speed up the process for approving and posting minutes, so those who want to know more about the work of the board can find out in a timely manner.

Of course, board meetings are open, so you are always welcome to attend and listen if you wish. We had several visitors at the last board meeting and their presence was welcomed.

I am looking for ways to keep our board work connected with you and your interests. One of the ideas is to hold a monthly “Talk with the President” session. I will be scheduling these soon. If you have other ideas for ways to keep the lines of communication open, let me know.

In connection and openness,

Mark Hickman
Board President

Ayla Halberstadt

July has been a month of unrest both in and out of our country. The tragic unjust killings of black men and police officers have left me feeling heartbroken. Heartbroken to live in a world where we can not go a week without hearing the news about another shooting in a community. The violence and unrest can feel overwhelming at times and can leave us feeling unsure as to what we can do for those communities in need and in our own communities. Even though I do not have a magic answer to this, I want to share an experience of mine that was a turning point for me on how I view my personal work as well as how I approach talking about black liberation and racial justice work with our youth at UUFCO.

At general assembly in Portland 2015 the Rev. Dr. Cornell West was our Ware Lecturer. He spent time earlier that day with youth and young adults who were attending GA. There were maybe 150 of us in the room with Dr. West as he took questions from the floor. A 16 year old white male came up and asked "I don't want overstep as a white person, but how do I use my voice as an ally for good without overpowering people of color?" Dr. West smiled and told him this bit of wisdom. "You are not an ally in this movement, you are a freedom fighter. We are all freedom fighters. Allies can step back when the going gets tough, but freedom fighters don't step back. They continue to fight even when things get tough."

It has taken time for me to learn how to articulate my feelings and thoughts around this topic that can seem so big. But I encourage you to sit and process as well, because there is no cookie cutter way to be an ally or a freedom fighter. I want to share a few articles I have found helpful in my own life. Most of these are coming from a UU faith lens. The first two are geared toward white privilege: Spiritual Practice for White Discomfort and A White Privilege Wake Up Call. The next is a sermon written by Kenny Wiley who is a DRE, UU World Senior Editor, and in leadership with Black Lives of UU. Sermon: Which Side Are You On?. The last link is the #BlackLivesMatter website so you can learn about the movement: #BlackLivesMatter.

I look forward to having conversations with you on this topic, on your feelings, ideas, and questions. We are in the middle of a revolution and I look forward to not sleeping through this with you all. In his book Between the World and Me Ta-Nehisi Coates writes, "You are growing into consciousness, and my wish for you is that you feel no need to constrict yourself to make other people comfortable." Continue to grow into your consciousness, continue to question, and continue to fight, because we have nothing to lose but our chains.

In faith and love,

Ayla Halberstadt, DRE

The Shared Ministries Committee

The Shared Ministries Committee and the Healthy Congregations Team are reading, reflecting, and learning together this summer in preparation for the new church year ahead. Among other resources, we are exploring the information presented by Dr. Kristin Guest, Rev. Carol McKinley, and Janine Larsen at the Pacific Western Region's Healthy Congregations Training Day on April 9, 2016 that six of our members participated in online. The information in "Three Marks of a Healthy Congregation" by David Brubaker seems especially relevant to our congregation as we reflect on our history and move into our future with a new mission to guide us. Below are excerpts from that resource.

Marks of a Healthy Congregation

1. Healthy Congregations Have a Clear and Shared Center.

Identity is vital not only for internal unity but also for our engagement with others outside our congregations. A shared purpose is equally important as it provides the 'social glue' for members who can work or serve together even when their beliefs are not entirely congruent. In practical terms, this means that congregational leaders need to pay more attention to the 'center' or core of the congregation than they do to maintaining the boundaries. A congregation's core is often expressed through its written statements of vision mission and values—and even more so, is lived out through its behaviors.

2. Healthy Congregations Have Clear But Permeable Boundaries.

While healthy congregations focus far more on their core than on their periphery, they are also aware that there are boundaries that determine what it means to 'belong' to the congregation....A healthy congregation...is clear about membership expectations but also anticipates that participants will both come and leave....Aside from the formal 'membership standards' that exist for most congregations, the far more important informal 'congregational culture' shapes the behavior of members and creates a unique congregational body. Congregational culture is determined by the geographic location, the founding personalities, the historic experience, and the denominational affiliation of the congregation—along with the composition of its current membership. Creating a welcoming culture will usually require a deliberate decision on the part of the congregational leaders to look critically at the congregation's culture and make adaptive changes.

3. Healthy Congregations Focus Outward Not Just Inward

While effective congregational leaders monitor their congregation's culture and model an attitude of welcoming, they also pay attention to the multiple environments in which the congregation is located. Most important is the local community in which the congregation is located, and the strengths and challenges of that community. A healthy congregation recognizes that it is both a reflection of and a resource for the community in which it resides, and its leaders invest time in understanding and serving that community. It's hard to overstate the importance of an outward focus for a local congregation. The most effective antidote to a destructive (high-level) conflict is to adopt an outward focus.

Members of the Shared Ministries Committee are: Marean Jordan, Susan Kinney, and Ellen Mercer. Members of the Healthy Congregations Team are: Don Hartsough, Nancy Hodge, Nancy Stevens, Judy Trask, and Pam Wilson. If you have questions, ideas, or concerns about congregational communication, please let us know.

Committee Updates

Governance

Houston, we have a problem! As the congregation has moved into our wonderful New Home, and as the fellowship and staff have grown, we have found that our ways of running the church need a tune-up. The Board has chartered the Governance Task Force to propose a comprehensive new set of policies – administration, budget, responsibilities and authority, finance and endowment, etc.

The Board picked members of the GTF for their experience with UUFCO and their knowledge of governance and policy. Members are: Wendy Howard, Immediate Past President; Judy Hurlburt, outgoing Board member; John Rhetts, past chair of COCC Board; and Jan Lindeman, Chair of Adult RE.

Meetings of the GTF are open to all members and friends. Ten minutes at the top of each agenda is set aside to hear from those who would like to be heard. The GTF will hold "fishbowl" meetings, so you may stay for the entire meeting if you wish to observe the deliberations. Also, feel free to contact any of the members by email with ideas, concerns, and suggestions. The next two scheduled meetings are August 1 from 11 – 12:30 and August 17 at 2:00 pm in the Margaret Fuller Conference Room.

Our process is likely to take many months. Our work products will be preliminary. That is, we are authorized only to make recommendations to the Board. Under the UUFCO Bylaws, the Board adopts policy. When our work is complete, the Governance Task Force will dissolve. Meanwhile we will be sharing preliminary documents with the congregation through our Bulletin Board space, open meetings, and some future small group gatherings. We welcome you to connect with us.

Greg Byrne,
Board member and ex officio member of the GTF

UUFCO Miscellany

Be "in the know" About UUFCO

by Wendy Howard

I met a new friend at UUFCO who asked me about having coffee so that she might get more information about how to get involved at our Fellowship. We walked into the Pete Seeger Gathering Hall and I said, "Let's check out the Kiosk and see what information is here for newcomers." (I have to admit that I hadn't checked out the holdings of the Kiosk since I showed someone where to pick up a pledge form in April, and where to find a Joy and Sorrows card in May.)

Wow! What a treasure our Kiosk is!!! There are brochures about Volunteer Activities, about Good Times activities, about our Mission Renewal Process, our Care Committee, Adult RE and more! Many thanks to Dale Clark for her creative and artistic brochures and displays! I invite everyone to check out this amazing resource frequently so we -- those who are regular attendees -- know what is happening in our own congregation.

In addition to the Kiosk there are two great bulletin boards, one in the hallway by the kitchen (for community happenings) and one in the area between the Margaret Fuller Conference Room and Olivia Brown Administration offices (for information about the Board, Ministerial Search and Governance.) These physical displays are also echoed and enriched on our website uufco.org and the weekly ACE (All Congregational Email).

Be "in the know" about UUFCCO.

Mindful Service: A Report

On Saturday, July 16 we had the first Mindful Service workshop -- a working workshop -- combining tasks of "practical work", e.g., polishing the surfaces in the kitchen, pulling weeds, preparing lunch, with exercises of mindfulness (Zen Buddhism) or embodied consciousness (Gurdjieff Work).

In addition to accomplishing several simple tasks in the building and on the property, participants reported the benefit of working with one another, getting acquainted with new people, and gaining new insights to connecting one's "inside" with one's "outside". One participant, Betsy Dickinson, shared this reflection:

"I am fortunate to have mistakenly signed up for today's Mindful Service. I assumed it would be a meditation seminar-- until I received an email requesting that we each bring work gloves, a hat, and sunblock. In fact Mindful Service turned out to be an enjoyable communal experience combining Zen meditation and quiet contemplative awareness in our daily chores. We were given an opportunity to contribute to our UU Fellowship while enjoying a fun time with new friends.

"Thanks to Chela (Sloper) and Tom (Wykes) for all their work in what we hope will be an ongoing event. If you see Mindful Service on the calendar, take it from an convert, grab the opportunity."

Joys & Sorrows

Joys and Sorrows shared in July

- Lyn Mattei & Duncan Brown are looking for shared housing for a friend of theirs who recently was a resident at Bethlehem Inn, but who also was hired fulltime at Pine Tavern. Please contact them if you have information for their friend.
- Gwen Yuill shared "a note of joy and gratitude for all the wonderful people that helped" with her move on July 9. "Love and thanks to all of you."
- Wendy Howard shared her concern on "how to stay present for all the nations' and world's tragedies, and not feel overwhelmed and close all our hearts. I hope through our faith community that we can find ways to respond to these circumstances that support our connection and caring for one another."
- Esther Chamberlin beamed about her granddaughter: "Jetta Rackleff was the hockey goalie for the USA World Cup Hockey Team. Jetta's team brought back the silver medal."
- A musical joy shared by Aleta Nissen: "So joyful to be rehearsing all summer to be in The Little Mermaid with my daughter Annika." Performances will be at the Tower Theatre the first weekend in August.
